A WONDERFUL PITCHER

Here is a record for Eddie Kilroy to shoot at when he commits matrimony and settles down to a retired life.

Chicago—Back in the days when star players weren't so prolific, when there was more here weeping and ball players were more picturesque, there came into major league baseball a little Irishman by the name of Kilroy—Matty Kilroy—who made good in a truly exceptional manner.

Matthew Kilroy was born in Philadelphia in 1867. He made his first appearance as a professional with the Augusta Club of the Southern League in 1885. The record he created that season is one of the chances of major league baseball. His batting was so brilliant that managers were beating paths to his backdoor, offering him contracts and big money.

Kilroy won 21 out of the 42 games that counted for the Augusta Club. The opposing batsmen failed miserably in their efforts to locate his southpaw delivery. For an athlete standing five feet seven, his speed was of the blinding sort. He tossed 248 hits; struck out 21 bases; his games were under five hit affairs; he held the opposing batsmen to an average of .260. A better going at the plate these times, would command $100,000 of any club owner's money. The club representing Chicago in the old American Association signed this prodigy for a song and a poorly sung one at that. The Way He Started

In the spring practice and exhibition games of 1886, Kilroy started the baseball world by holding the Washington Club of the National League to a pair of singles and fanning 15. A few days later he struck out 15 of the Boston Nationals and gave them a trimming. These feats placed the name of Kilroy under the glare of the spotlight. He immediately became an attraction.

In the opening game of the season this little wonder didn't disappoint the expectant fan, for he held the Brooklyn team to a pair of singles and fanned eight. In the last game of the same series he again held Brooklyn to a pair of doubtful singles and handed them a shutout. In his first two games he issued but three passes.

This stunning southpaw topped off this remarkable work by holding the Athletics to one hit and fanned 13 men. It must be remembered that these stunts he pulled off in his first ten days in big league society.

There was about the same percentage of great, mediocre and lousy hurlers in games those days as we have today. Kilroy, however, was beyond the best of them for he was a splendid ball player and batsman. His sensational hitting had fanned twenty-four with excitement and wonder. It was Kilroy the prodigy! Kilroy the King!

Of the 66 games hurled by Kilroy in 1886, in 22 of them he held the opposing teams to four hits or less. In his last three career hit games, also a four-hit affair, a record in this line for major league baseball. Fanning 566 men in one season is the record for baseball—major and minor leagues.

While not the highest average percentage it is the greatest in numbers ever struck out in one season. In 1888, this left handed sensation hurled nine games against the Athletics, his home team club in which he allowed but 35 hits, also fanned 105 batsmen. In one of these games he held the A's to one hit and fanned 16, yet he lost the game.

This was about the luck that followed Kilroy through his hit games in the league. The support accorded to Kilroy's slanting hurling was away below par. Holding the opposing batsmen to an average of .265 and allowing but an average of 1.79 earned runs a game and yet winning but 29 out of the 66 games that counted, shows the greatest wastage of high grade hurling ever recorded in major league baseball. The club finished the season with a percentage in games won of .268, while Kilroy had a percentage of .274 in victories.

In 1887, under the four strike rule, Kilroy was supreme. When 70 per cent of the southpaw hurlers failed to deliver 50 per cent of the restrictions placed upon the hurlers of that year, Kilroy was at his best. He outshined, outplayed all southpaw hurlers in the game and the right handers might also be added. No hurler in other of the major leagues could have done with him. Winning 47 games, he set a world's record for southpaw hurlers. It has never been approached by any left hander, before or since, and, possibly never will be.

Pitching 68 games totalling 609 innings, is some achievement for either a right or left handed hurler. Only Tom Lowmyer has ever approached in number of innings and Ed Morris and Charles (Lacy) Baldwin are within four games of his record in games won, for both of these notable pitchers of the olden days won over to games in a season.

Kilroy possessed marvelous curves. For a hurler of his age, he had tremendous speed. It would pitch through an entire game and would be as strong at the finish as when he started through the first ball.

As an all-around player, Kilroy was high class. A splendid batsman, smart on the base lines, as lively as a cat in making a dash for home and a water cooler bases, he never had a superior. Jimmy Galvin, with the Duffalo and Pittsburgh clubs during the 80's was the only hurler who compared with Kilroy in nipping the unwary base runner. It is said that Kilroy averaged .300 in batting during his career, where he threw out 300 in one game. His left handedness gave him the shade over Galvin in that line.

Pitching 275 games in his first five years in professional ball, which meant 2,475 innings or 50 games a year, this wonderful southpaw couldn't rest at all. With the Boston club of the Players League in 1890, he practically finished his career in major league baseball. From 1882 until 1897, Kilroy pitched for the Syracuse club. In 1888, the Chicago Nationals induced him to try the big stuff again. He pitched 12 games winning six and losing six, it wasn't a poor attempt at a comeback, but Matty decided he had enough and quit the big stuff and the game.

The game hasn't had a left hander of the Kilroy type since. Matty himself was the sensation of the noble pastime. He was the original and only Kilroy. His marvellous hurling during the years of 1886, 1887 and 1889, equals any that have been recorded since. The best efforts of Luke Woodell of Nap Rucker or Theodore Hendricks failed to dim the brilliancy of Kilroy's hurling when he was going his best during the days he set the baseball world aflame by his marvellous achievements.

Kilroy was a remarkable player as well as a phenomenal hurler. He was a leader for work. He never loafed. When the noble umpire called Play Ball, this little white man was on his feet and ready to play every minute for he was a ball player from his toe plate to the cap that he always wore jauntily down his face.

HEARD ON THE STREET

A lady attending a society function, feeling indisposed, ordered her chauffeur to drive her to her doctor.

The doctor diagnosed her case very quickly.

"You have caught a chill," he said, "Drive straight home, get dressed and go to bed."

"What's the matter, Sam?" sternly inquired the judge. "Haven't you been working late?"

"No Sir," was the response. "Ah ain't bin able to find mad dice."

Shall an old colored man, on religious assurance: "I hab heard folks say, 'Hope' I has religion but I don't know"; but I never heard a man say, 'I hopes I has money, but I don't know,' but I never heard a man say, 'I hopes I has religion but I don't know, ain't gine to do no mo' good dan der money what yer hopes y's got, but I don't know."

A splinter encountered some boys in the old swimming hole, minus everything but Nature's garb and was horrified. "Isn't it against the law to bathe without suits on little boys?"

"This man," announced treckled Tommy "But Jimmy's father is a policeman so you can come on in."

Layers are sometimes mighty particular. The other day one of these learned and amiable gentlemen was waited upon by a young man, who began by saying: "My father did and made a will—"

"Is it possible? I never heard of such a thing," answered the waiter.

"I thought it happened every day," said the young man, "but there is to be any difficulty about it, I had better give you a fee to attend to the business."

The fee given, and the waiter observed: "Oh, I think I know what you mean. You mean that your father made a will and died. Yes, yes, that must be it."

GARDINER AND WOODSWORTH REPLY TO SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

The speech said conditions in their equity in their farms. The Canada were fundamentally sound only hope of recovery lay in an immediate writing down of debt and interest. Failing this farmers would become bankrupts, industry would collapse. In his view, present troubles arose out of the economic system. Under this system, we now saw luxury and starvation by the poor, wealth and poverty abundance and scarcity. Such a system certainly was wrong. It must be changed. Mr. Woodsworth at once attacked the government for curtailing purchasing power. The salary cuts were unwise. But if the government intended to cut these salaries by ten per cent why not cut the national debt by ten per cent, cut private mortgages by a like amount.

Our troubles arose from a contradiction in world politics. Countries took on a huge international debt, yet endeavored to maintain the same economic system. Light between nations could be paid only in goods or services. As economic units the credit nations refused to accept payment. The government's unemployment relief policies had failed. Mr. Woodsworth, he was informed, $2,408,424 had been spent in Winnipeg on relief. More than 11,000 were being supported and another 500 families were living on charity. Yet Mr. Bennett got up in parliament and boasted of the success his tariff policies had brought to Canada. He was in Montreal employing 20 men announced a cut in civil service salaries when there were civil servants at a huge factory.

Montreal employing 20 men announced a cut in civil service salaries when there were civil servants at a huge factory. The speech said, was a disappointment. The country would be disheartened by the absence of leadership. The speech had not much as mentioned unemployment nor agricultural conditions. The latter, in the west, were worse than one year ago. There was more bankruptcy, more insolvency on the prairies this year than last, more than ever before. Knowledge, Western farmers, in fact, were gradually losing

The speech from the throne recalled the fortitude with which Canadians had borne adversity. It was like extolling the fortitude of a lion under a hammer. Canadians had a word of consolation from those words. It was all very well for a person who has never known a democratic government. He decried to change our system of government slowly and he warned the house to take measures to prevent its sudden collapse. Changes should be brought in gradually and the terrible hardships and sufferings of a sudden complete breakdown averted.

HANNA HERALD
PLANT DESTROYED
BY FIRE

The Hanna Herald, one of Alberta's brightest weeklies, was totally destroyed by fire on Sunday morning.

The members of the C. W. N. A. of which Mr. Herb McGraw, proprietor, is the efficient secretary, will each feel the deepest sympathy for him, in this heavy loss which he has been called upon to face.

The Herald was one of the best equipped plants to be found outside of the city.

However, true to his unconquerable spirit he is already making arrangements for a new plant which he expects to have installed within the next month.

THE STATE MUST BE PRESERVED

The Winnipeg Free Press states that: A few weeks ago Sir Norman Angell, the distinguished British Socialist, suggested that the more far-reaching socialists were now willing to join their intellectual forces with those of capitalism in an endeavor to prevent the capitalist system from running completely on the rocks, and going to smash. Orthodox Socialist thinkers, Sir Norman pointed out, might legally take ground that as capitalism was obviously in the very gravest difficulties, this was all to the good so far as they were concerned, and that when the system went to pieces it was only doing what Socialists had wanted it to do, and had worked for, ever since the Socialist movement became a coherent party of propaganda and policy.

Sir Norman Angell said that while this might be all right from a philosophical point of view, it was absurd as a practical attitude for meeting existing conditions. What ever might be wrong with the social system, it was a fabric of enormous complexity and importance by which the life, and hence the individual countries was held together in a workable organization, but on which the international connections of the world depended for their continuation. Anybody who went about lightly heartily anticipating the breakdown of capitalism, Sir Norman said, was a fool. The destruction of capitalism would involve the breakdown of society, and the breakdown of society at this particular phase in its history would have appalling consequences on the lives of the multitudes.

Sir Norman Angell did not want the delicate machinery of social life which has been built up during the past half century to be destroyed either by Socialists or by capitalist governments. It was of people still to have the fabric of organization which has brought them their daily bread and butter and water and light and heat which enable cities like London and Paris and Montreal and Winnipeg to function as units of population. And he said that matters had now reached a stage where Socialists should do their best to work in harmony with other parties, and other theories of political opinion, to the end that the constructive of modern society should be protected against further destruction.

It may be ironical for a Socialist to come out as a defender of the social system which Socialism in its early stages set out to abolish, but Sir Norman Angell's attitude might be taken as an example by the political thinkers of other parties who are devoted specifically to the preservation of the capitalist order of society. He has penetrated to the truth, which most of the party thinkers have as yet failed to discover, that we have reached a state of affairs when the only thing that matters is to prevent the further working of the economic foundations on which society is built. Sir Norman Angell has put party politics aside for the greater obligation of safeguarding the whole community from the dangers which are already invading it so seriously.

This is a great deal farther than the old line parties have yet come to. It is an efficient organization by which the disastrous downward movement may be checked, political thinking will have to climb out of the part on which it has been in which it is blindly waiting, and look at the situation in the light of reality; look at it with an eye unclouded by party considerations. If it is impossible for the political leaders to do this, it should not be impossible for the people on whom the leaders depend for support to make it clear that this is what is wanted. The people will grasp the fact long before the politicians that only by closing up the rifts and attacking the problems of the time with a united front, is there any hope of getting round the phase in its history which would have appalling consequences on the lives of the multitudes.

The Merry-makers held their regular meeting in the School House last Wednesday evening. (Owing to the condition of the roads some were unable to attend.) Group No. 3 put on a very good program. Some of their songs were unable to get there, nevertheless they did their best. Mr. Brundage gave an interesting talk on the war in the east. It was decided to put the Musical Show off a little earlier. If possible, it was impossible to get in such practices in. However a few of the closer ones near town are putting on a play at the next meeting. We are wondering why some people are so late in coming. We would like to see their singing, a little earlier. If possible, after a pleasant evening tea and cake was served, which everyone enjoyed.

Mrs. J. McIlwain was a delegate to Grand Lodge held in Calgary last week.

Mrs. Miss Brown has been the guest of Mrs. C. White at Strathmore for the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Pianto are taking Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hallberg, Albert St. Jean, A. Thomson, Hans Thomson, Chester Peterson, at a delightful winter party Friday night. Mr. Brown scored highest, while Tommy was lowest having lost several points in the "go-to-it" hands. A wintery midnight lunch was served and after an hour of hilarious and friendly banter the guests departed for home everyone pronouncing a wonderful time.

No. 14, 14, 14, Jean did not get that slunk on the ditch again. Harold said the den was not doney enough.

personal gratification of any politician.

Vague assertions about the potential resources and strength of the country get nowhere as excuses for parties' ambitions. The strength, resources, and boundless opportunities inherent in the country are the great and irrefutable heritage of the people; what needs overhauling is the political line-up, the mental approach to the problem, and the policies by which it is being managed; and this puts the whole question, in a country governed by popular institutions, squarely up to the people. With them the decision rests and when the choice comes, they must make it.

"MAY I USE THE 'PHONE?"

Empress of Britain as Floating Pay Station.

Madeira got a new thrill recently when telephone communication was established between that distant island and London, which is the first time.

The occasion was the arrival of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain at Funchal on the west coast of the island. The longest distance in the world and Madeira was not slow to recognize a chance to make land history.

During her stay there, the Empress was host to many visitors. Among them were two who casually asked, "May I use the phone?"

Just as casually the telephone operator of the ship asked on London and put the callers through over 200 miles of water.

Reports from the Empress of Britain, now at Madeira, confirm that the wireless telephone communication between the ship and the island was established in Madeira, Funchal, to Madeira. The longest distance in the world and Madeira was not slow to recognize a chance to make land history.

During her stay there, the Empress was host to many visitors. Among them were two who casually asked, "May I use the phone?"

Just as casually the telephone operator of the ship asked on London and put the callers through over 200 miles of water.
